SUNY New Paltz chosen ‘Hottest Small State School’

NEW PALTZ — SUNY New Paltz has been chosen as the “Hottest Small State School” in the nation by the 2008 Kaplan/NewswEEK “How to Get into College” guide.

As one of the “25 Hottest Schools in America,” SUNY New Paltz has been recognized for its academic excellence and its unique appeal to students seeking entry into the top schools in the country. One of the contributing factors to the college’s selection was based on admission statistics.

L. David Eaton, vice president of enrollment management at SUNY New Paltz, said he is not surprised, noting that New Paltz has experienced a 40 percent spike in freshman applications since 2000.

For the 17th consecutive year, New Paltz has led SUNY colleges with the highest number of overall applications, which has allowed the college to be more selective in its admissions process. This fall, the college accepted 32 percent of its first-year applicants and 36 percent of its transfer applicants.

“What makes us unique and attractive to prospective students is an engaging atmosphere, an extraordinary array of academic programs, and a location that is stunning in its natural beauty, in a college town that is a ‘hot’ destination for visitors in its own right,” Eaton said.

Information about each of the 25 “hot” schools will appear in the 264-page guide, which arrives on newsstands on Monday. In addition to the “Hottest” list and other informative articles, the guide also provides readers with Kaplan’s inside look into the admissions process.

Interviews with guidance counselors, students, faculty and alumni were conducted by NewswEEK and Kaplan to learn what makes the college unique.

“It’s an attractive option for students from all over the state,” said Jason Palmer, a contributing editor for the guide. “Students we spoke to appreciate the fact that New Paltz has a small town environment, yet is still close enough to New York City that they can get away for an evening or a weekend.”

Alicia Mejias, a May 2007 graduate of the college, who is featured in the SUNY New Paltz section, spoke about choosing the college for its tuition, proximity to home and student organizations.

Palmer said many first-generation college students like Mejias credited SUNY New Paltz’s diverse student body with making people of different backgrounds feel at home. Of the first-year students reporting their ethnicity, 27 percent come from traditionally underrepresented groups.

Students also spoke highly of the new 57,000-square-foot Athletic and Wellness Center that opened in 2006.

SUNY New Paltz is also ranked eighth among the best public universities and 44th among public and private universities in the North that offer bachelor’s and master’s degree programs, according to the U.S. News & World Report’s rankings for America’s Best Colleges 2007.
