NY STATE POLITICAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION CONFERENCE
Here at SUNY New Paltz.

Next week (4/23-4/24) SUNY New Paltz hosts the annual meeting of the New York State Political Science Association. At this conference, political scientists from all over the world present their recent work at panels over two days.

You can check out a copy of the conference program on the Political Science and International Relations Department Blackboard site to see what panels you might like to attend, or just drop by the department office to look at a copy.

Two students from New Paltz will be presenting at the conference. They are: Masooma Rahmaty, who will present her paper “Promotion of Human Rights and the Responsibility to Prevent,” and Terence Gagstetter, whose paper is titled “Under the Influence: The Role of Solicitor General and Interest Group Amicus Curiae Briefs in Environmental Cases at the U.S. Supreme Court.” Good luck to both of them!

Professor Gerald Benjamin will give the keynote address at the conference on Saturday morning at 10:15: “Looking Back, Looking Ahead: A Half Century as a Political Scientist in New York.”

Don’t miss this exciting event!
Internships

Shomari Linton ('17) at NYPIRG

As an intern for NYPIRG in the Environmental Protection Campaign, it was exciting to go to SUNY Purchase and meet other project leaders from different schools. I could see that they all are making a difference by making people aware of the resources around them. Attending workshops on how to be a great project leader, hunger and homelessness in SUNY schools, and many others showed me how I myself am on a path to making a difference by just being aware and having the ability to tell others.
