Elements of an Effective Internship Programs

Meaningful project based work with clearly defined expectations

- The best internship experiences typically include one or more well-structured projects with clear outcomes and expectations. Internship programs that are undefined, lack structure, or limited to menial tasks, usually result in more work for the supervisor and lack of opportunity for the intern to develop much needed professional skills. Identify meaningful projects that aligns with the intern's major, allows the intern to develop new skills and is beneficial to the employer.

Structured training and on-boarding program to ensure the intern has the knowledge, skills, and familiarity with the organization.

- Once you have identified the projects that the intern will address, develop a training program that ensures they have the skills, knowledge, and familiarity with resource (i.e. both human and non-human) to complete the project.

Provide regular supervision and feedback

- This is absolutely essential to the success of the intern. Setting aside regularly scheduled time to discuss the experience and provide direction will not only ensure the proper completion of the project(s), but also provides the opportunity to mentor interns in the development of their professional skills.

Provide professional networking opportunities

- This is often perceived as an indirect benefit. Make this an intentional benefit by introducing the intern(s) to staff in other departments and/or sister organizations.

Treat the intern as another professional

- When outlining the project(s) and expectations, make it clear that they will be held to the same standard as other professional staff members.

Credit vs. Non-Credit Bearing Internships

Depending on the number hours involved and relevance to a student's area of study, the internship can be completed for credit. It is important to note that a student must have completed 60 credit hours and have 2.5 GPA or higher in order to be eligible for a credit bearing internship.

If a student decides to pursue credit for an internship, approval will be determined by a faculty advisor and agreed to by the internship site supervisor. If all parties agree that an internship will be completed for credit, the site supervisor may be required to do the following:

- Agree to the learning objectives developed by you, the site supervisor, the student and the student's faculty advisor
- Provide an outline of expectations and goals (i.e. job description)
- Provide sufficient training/orientation
- Provide feedback on a regular basis (e.g., weekly meetings)
- Complete a final evaluation of the intern's performance. Depending on the student's major, a mid-point evaluation may be required.
- Complete a survey following the completion of the survey

If a student is not eligible for, or decides that they don't want to complete an internship for credit, that student is not prevent from pursuing and/or being hired for such an opportunity. Non-credit bearing internship do not require any of the aforementioned actions by the site supervisor. However, these actions are elements of a mutually beneficial and successful internship.
