National Park Service centennial focus of Oct. 12 conference at FDR site

Wednesday, August 10, 2016

HYDE PARK >> A daylong conference commemorating the National Park Service centennial will take place from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 12, at the Henry A. Wallace Center of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library and Museum.

National Park Service Centennial: Landscape Conservation in the Hudson River Valley, will follow a narrative thread connecting conservation efforts from the Hudson River School painters through to strategies to protect the Hudson River valley landscape for the next 100 years. The luncheon keynote will provide examples of conservation efforts and foreshadow future possibilities and techniques for conservation. Participants will also respond to preliminary findings of a study currently being conducted by the Regional Plan Association and The Benjamin Center at SUNY New Paltz.
